WHAT TO WATCH FOR THIS WEEKEND:

DIXON'S MOMENTUM: Coming off his first win of 2011 at the Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course last Sunday, Scott Dixon (above) looks to ride success on the short oval at New Hampshire back into the title picture. Can Dixon, the only driver to finish in the top five in each of the four previous races, get a second-straight win and make the championship a three-man race?

INDYCAR'S BACK: The IZOD IndyCar® Series returns to New Hampshire Motor Speedway for the first time in more than a decade. The "Magic Mile" hosted seven Indy car races from 1992-1998 with drivers such as Bobby Rahal, Nigel Mansell, Al Unser Jr. and Tony Stewart claiming race wins. Who will join the list of Indy car winners at NHMS?

GIRLS, GIRLS, GIRLS: For the first time ever, a "Magic Mile"-record four women have entered to race at New Hampshire Motor Speedway this weekend. Ana Beatriz (Dreyer & Reinbold Racing), Pippa Mann (above, Rahal Letterman Lanigan Racing), Danica Patrick (Andretti Autosport) and Simona De Silvestro (HVM Racing) will all attempt to qualify for the MoveThatBlock.com Indy® 225.

POWER DEFENSE: Last year, Dario Franchitti overcame what some people thought was an insurmountable advantage held by Will Power over the final third of the season. In 2011, Power looks to turn the tables on Franchitti. Can the Team Penske driver, who enters New Hampshire trailing Franchitti by 62 points, cut into the point lead?

ALL IN THE FAMILY: Second-generation racer Graham Rahal will look to add to his family's legacy at New Hampshire Motor Speedway. Rahal's father Bobby won the first Indy car race at New Hampshire in his championship-winning season of 1992 for Rahal-Hogan Racing. Can the younger Rahal win in series' return to Loudon?
